sKyes bu rnâm 'byed bshad pa gzhon nu'i mgul rgyan Attributed to Sa-skya Paññita Kun-dga' rgyal-mtshan*

Christoph Cüppers

The regent (sde-srid) Sangs-rgyas rgya-mtsho (1653-1705), in his Guidelines for Government Officials,¹ written shortly after his appointment as regent in the year 1679, quotes on several occasions canonical and non-canonical Nitiśāstra and Subhāṣita literature, with the purpose of illustrating more clearly the attitude officials should display when occupying a government position. Among these texts the regent

* My heartfelt thanks go to Tsering Lama 'Phrin-las bzang-po for his generous willingness to discuss some of the nuances of the Tibetan wording contained in the text. Similarly, I express my gratitude to Philip Pierce, the skyes-bu dam-pa, for his usual unfailing support in not only polishing my English, but also correcting my translation from the Tibetan. Many thanks are also due to Yasuhiro Sueki for providing some reference material from the treasures of the Library of the International College for Advanced Buddhist Studies in Tokyo. Further, I am indebted to Dan Martin for sharing his bibliographic collections of Subhāṣita and legs bshad texts.

quoted are the well-known Prajñādaṇḍa (lugs kyi bstan bcos shes rab sdong bu) and the Cāṇakya Rājanitiśāstra (tsa na ka rgyal po lugs kyi bstan bcos) and, of course, the famous Sa-skya Legs-bshad, or, more properly, Legs par bshad pa rin po che’i gter (Skt. Subhāṣita-ratnānadhi), composed by Sa-skya Panḍita Kun-dga’ rgyal-mtshan (1182-1251).

Among the remaining Nīti texts quoted in the Guidelines for Government Officials we find: a) sKyes bu’i rnam ’byed bshad pa gzhon nu’i mgul rgyan; b) Drang thig mthong ba ’dzum shor² and c) the verses composed by sKyid-shod zhabs-drung A-khu bKra-shis.³ A few years ago a learned Tibetan scholar from Lhasa, the late Sa-skya mkhan-po Tshul-khrims rgyal-mtshan, former head of the astrological section of the Medical Institute (sman rtsis khang) in Lhasa, collected and printed a set of three volumes with rare and unknown Sa-skya-pa texts not included in the earlier published Sa-skya bKa’-’bum.⁴ The third volume of this supplementary collection contains the text sKyes bu’i rnam ’byed bshad pa gzhon nu’i mgul rgyan.⁵ The colophon of this text states that its author was Sa-skya Paṇḍita Kun-dga’ rgyal-mtshan, even if the regent Sangs-rgyas rgya-mtsho does not mention him as such in any quotation. He does mention Sa-skya Paṇḍita but only when quoting from the Legs par bshad pa rin po che’i gter. Does this mean that the regent had doubts that the gZhon nu’i mgul rgyan was written by the learned man from Sa-skya? Or did he proceed so in order to distinguish between the two texts written by the same author?6

³ On sKyid-shod zhabs-drung A-khu bKra-shis (1531-1589) see gDung dkar tshig mdzod chen mo, p. 256. Up to now the text in question has not surfaced.
⁵ Vol. 3, pp. 289-301, according to the margin in the offset print; altogether the text consists of seven folios. For this present Tibetan offset edition Sa-skya mkhan-po Tshul-khrims rgyal-mtshan used five different versions when collating this text. Davenport (2000), p. 309, n. 69, mentions that a copy of the Fifth Dalai Lama’s Lugs zung dang ‘brel ba’i bslab bya mu thi la’i phreng ba (Kalimpong: Tibet Mirror Press, 1960) contains in its second half (pp. 13-24) a text entitled Skyes bu’i rnam ’byed gzhon nu’i mgul rgyan.

Regarding the composition of the gZhon nu’i mgul rgyan, it consists of five chapters to which five more ślokas are added, including the dedication verse. Altogether we find 3467 pādas, of which four - as usual - are combined into a verse or śloka.8 The first two pādas of chapter two form a unit by themselves. It seems that the author of the Legs bshad don ’grel combined the pādas of the fifth chapter differently, when deciding which four consecutive pādas to unite into a verse.

Sangs-rgyas rgya-mtsho’s interest in this text with respect to the Guidelines for Government Officials was limited to the first two chapters. These two chapters are closely related, the second one being a more detailed description of the subjects mentioned in the first. The regent quotes in section 1.62. (the chapter on the duties of regents) the verses 2.24 and 2.25; in section 3.3. (the chapter on the duties of ministers) the pādas c and d from verse 1.7; in section 3.5. the verse 2.20; in section 3.9. the pādas a and b of verse 1.8; in section 8.1. (the chapter on 6 Other Tibetan scholars have also questioned the attribution of this text to Sa-skya Paṇḍita. See Jackson (1985), pp. 106-7 and 119-20; also Jackson (1991). Davenport (2000), p. 313, n. 110, follows Sa-skya mkhan-po Sangs-rgyas bstan-'dzin, the author of the Legs bshad don ’grel, in attributing this text to Sa-pan.

7 Chapt. 1 contains 40 pādas, chap. 2 130, chap. 3 only 36, chap. 4 40, chap. 5 80, and the last chapter 20.
8 The enumeration was done by me.
the duties of treasurers) the verse 2.29; in section 11.1. (the chapter on the duties of the magistrates and the storekeepers) the pādas c and d of verse 1.9 and also the whole of verse 2.28; in section 12.1. (the chapter on the duties of cooks, etc.) the pādas a und b of verse 1.10 and also the whole of verse 2.30; and in section 12.3. the verse 2.26.⁹

The composition and contents of the Skye bu'i rnam 'byed bshad pa are similar to other Subhāṣita or Nitiśātra texts. The work deals with ethics and general wisdom; reference to the teaching of the Buddha is made, particularly the two introductory verses in chapter one and at the end of the work.¹⁰

The first chapter contains 10 verses setting out the difference between good and bad, devoting two pādas of a verse to each. The following chapter explains in its 33 verses the difference between good and bad in detail. Chapters three and four tell what one should practise and what should be rejected respectively. In both these chapters persons are compared to animals in terms of good or bad characteristics. The fifth and last chapter mentions the wise man and the fool in the way typical of such works.¹¹ In this chapter the formal pattern of four pādas to a verse is not followed in two instances, namely verse 5.5 and verse 5.8, which I combined into six pādas each.

¹⁰ See ślokas 5.11 ff.
¹¹ At present I do not have the leisure to compare the Skyes bu rnam 'byed bshad pa with other Subhāṣita texts - either in Sanskrit or Tibetan - in order to find verse parallels, or perhaps eventually to find a text from which the author may have drawn his inspiration. This should be followed up in future. My main intention here is to introduce the text and provide a preliminary edition and translation of it with the hope that it may serve the needs of those interested in a deeper study. I am to some extent aware of the problems still to be solved.

\(^2\) In my translation I follow the reading stor-shing given in Dvangs 12.1. Tibetan informants paraphrased the word as dkrug-shing, meaning "instigator". The expression gtor-shing is explained by Tsering Lama as small sticks that are inserted into a freshly made gtor-ma in order to attach small slabs of butter to it. If one presses a stick too deeply into the dough, the gtor-ma may fall apart. Aris (1986), p. 147, translates: "As for the companion of clear intellect and few words, If slanders are committed they are like pieces of wood that have been misplaced."

All that one does must be consistent with this.}

\(^{24}\) shes-rig. Note that this term does not occur in the Sa skya legs bshad. This fact could possibly be used as an indication that the author of the sKyes bu rnam 'byed bshad pa is not Sa-skya Paṇḍita. As far as I see, only the term shes-rab is used in the Sa skya legs bshad and other Nītiśastras such as Nāgārjuna’s Prajñāśataka. Although of rare frequency in some - mostly Pramāṇa - texts found in the bsTan 'gyur, the term seems to be promoted by Tsong-kha-pa and his school. But this needs some further investigation.

An Explanation of the Classification of People, A Youth's Necklace, was composed by the Buddhist monk Kun dga' rgyal mtshan dpal bzang po, a speaker of reason, at the glorious Sa skya temple.
[This copy was made] by using five books.

\textsuperscript{83} 'khor gsum yongs su dag pa refers to the smon lam 'khor gsum or to 'khor gsum rnam dag, the "three spheres" of perfect purity [of subject, object and self].
